Revenues for fiscal year 2000 were $1,231 million, 90 percent higher than revenues of $648 million in fiscal year 1999.

"The company's performance this quarter reflects both the strong demand for semiconductor capital equipment as well as our increased penetration in the etch and CMP markets," stated James W. Bagley, chairman and chief executive officer. "I am pleased with the robust growth in new orders for our advanced etch and CMP systems and the continued improvement in the company's operating profit.

"The move to copper and low-k materials, the transition to the sub 0.13 μ m technology node, and the implementation of 300 mm pilot lines are converging at a time when the industry is ramping production capacity to meet the broad demand for semiconductor devices. Lam is well positioned to continue to benefit from the industry's need for next-generation, leading edge wafer processing systems," Bagley concluded.

(1) Diluted earnings per share for the three and twelve month periods ended June 25, 2000 assumes conversion of convertible subordinated notes (the "Notes"). Accordingly, interest expense net of taxes of $3,840 and $14,996 respectively, must be added to net income for computing diluted earnings per share. Conversion of the Notes for all other periods presented was antidilutive and therefore excluded from the calculation of diluted earnings per share.
