Ontrak Systems Names Jim Kuhl Vice President Of Operations

Ontrak Systems Names Jim Kuhl Vice President Of Operations SAN JOSE, Calif., June 17, 1998 - OnTrak Systems, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Lam Research Corporation (Nasdaq: LRCX), today announced the appointment of Jim Kuhl as vice president of operations. Kuhl will be responsible for the overall operations of the manufacturing and materials organization for OnTrak's cleaning equipment product lines. He will report directly to Jerry Cutini, president of OnTrak.

Kuhl brings with him more than 15 years of direct experience in operations and manufacturing. Prior to joining OnTrak, he was vice president of operations at Adept Technology. His past accomplishments include a leading role streamlining the manufacturing operations at Motorola, which contributed to the company's Malcolm Baldridge Award achievement.

"In this key position, Jim's wealth of experience and outstanding record of achievements will prove invaluable to OnTrak as we continue to expand our business operations," said Cutini. "His appointment will further strengthen OnTrak's management team and increase our ability to provide world class solutions to our customers."

OnTrak Systems, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Lam Research Corporation, is a leading supplier of advanced wafer processing equipment to the worldwide semiconductor industry. The company primarily focuses on providing cleaning process solutions for CMP. OnTrak's Double-Sided Scrubbing (DSS®) and Chemical Mechanical Cleaning (CMC) technology is utilized for CMP cleaning in fabs worldwide. OnTrak is located in San Jose, California.
